Voting Accessibility

From: <https://www.ada.gov/topics/voting/>

The ADA is not the only federal law that safeguards the voting rights of a person with a disability. Other federal laws include:

Federal Law	Description
Voting Rights Act of 1965	Requires election officials to allow a voter who is blind or has another disability to receive assistance from a person of the voter's choice. Prohibits election officials from conditioning the right to vote on being able to read or write, attaining a particular level of education, or passing an interpretation "test."
Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act of 1984	Requires election officials to provide either an accessible polling place in federal elections or an alternate means of voting.
National Voter Registration Act of 1993	Requires all offices that provide public assistance or state-funded programs that primarily serve persons with disabilities to provide an opportunity to register to vote in federal elections.
Help America Vote Act of 2002	Requires election officials responsible for conducting federal elections to: <ul data-bbox="548 1241 1430 1402" style="list-style-type: none">• provide at least one accessible voting system for persons with disabilities at each polling place; and• ensure that the accessible voting system provides the same privacy and independence that other voters receive.
